

HOW BISHOPS ARE APPOINTED

Introduction

The ultimate decision in appointing bishops rests with the Pope, and he is free to select anyone he chooses. But how does he determine the man to select?

The process for selecting candidates for the episcopacy normally begins at the diocesan level and works its way through a series of consultations until it reaches Rome. It is a process bound by strict confidentiality and involves a number of important players – the most influential being the Apostolic Nuncio, the Congregation for Bishops, and the Pope. It can be a time-consuming process, often taking eight months or more to complete. While there are distinctions between the appointment of a priest to the Office of Bishop, a bishop's later transfer to another diocese, or a bishop's promotion to archbishop, the basic outlines of the process remain the same.

Key Terms

Apostolic Nuncio or Papal Nuncio

The Pope's representative to both the government and to the hierarchy of a given nation; the nuncio is a key person in deciding what names are recommended to the Congregation for Bishops in Rome for possible episcopal appointment.

Congregation for Bishops

*A department of the Vatican's Roman Curia, headed by a Cardinal. The head of the Congregation, called the "Prefect." Among the Congregation's responsibilities are moderating all aspects of episcopal appointments; assisting bishops in the correct exercise of their pastoral functions; handling ad limina visits (regular visits to Rome by bishops every five years); and establishing episcopal conferences and reviewing their decrees as required by canon law.*

Diocesan Bishop

Pastoral and legal head and representative of a diocese.

Terna

A list of three candidates for a vacant office.

Curricula Vitae

An account of a member of the clergy's education, experience, career, and qualifications for ministry.

Stage 1: Recommendations of bishops

Every bishop may submit to the archbishop of his province the names of priests he thinks would make good bishops. Prior to the regular province meeting (usually annually), the archbishop distributes to all the bishops of the province the names and curricula vitae of priests that have been submitted to him. Following a discussion among the bishops, a vote is taken on which names to recommend, should the occasion arise. The vote tally, together with the minutes of the meeting, is then forwarded by the archbishop to the apostolic nuncio in Washington. The list is also submitted to the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB).

Stage 2: The Apostolic Nuncio

By overseeing the final list of names forwarded to Rome, the apostolic nuncio not only gathers facts and information about potential candidates, but also interprets that information for the Congregation for Bishops in Rome. Great weight is given to the nuncio's recommendations, but it is important to remember that the nuncio's role as "gatekeeper," however, does not mean that his recommendations are always followed.

For Diocesan Bishops

- After receiving the list of candidates forwarded by a province, the apostolic nuncio conducts his own investigation into the suitability of the candidates.
- A report is requested from the current bishop or the administrator of a diocese on the conditions and needs of the diocese. If the appointment is a replacement for a diocesan bishop or archbishop about to retire, consideration will be given to the incumbent's recommendations. Broad consultation within the diocese is encouraged with regard to the needs of the diocese, but not necessarily the names of candidates.
- The report is to include the names of individuals in the diocese with whom the Nuncio might consult and how to contact them.
- Previous bishops of the diocese are usually consulted.
- The president and vice-president of the USCCB are consulted.
- If the vacancy to be filled is an archdiocese, other archbishops in the United States may be consulted.
- At this point, the nuncio narrows his list and a questionnaire is sent to 20 or 30 people who know each of the candidates for their input.
- All material is collected and reviewed by the nuncio, and a report is prepared. Three candidates are listed alphabetically – called the "terna" – with the nuncio's preference noted. All materials are then forwarded to the Congregation for Bishops in Rome.

Stage 3: Congregation for Bishops

Once all the documentation from the nuncio is complete and in order, and the Prefect of The Congregation for Bishops approves, the process moves forward. If the appointment involves a bishop who is being transferred, the matter may be handled by the Prefect and the staff. If, however, the appointment is of a priest to the episcopacy, the full Congregation is ordinarily involved.

A cardinal relator is chosen to summarize the documentation and make a report to the full Congregation, which generally meets twice a month on Thursdays. After hearing the cardinal relator's report, the Congregation discusses the appointment and then votes. The Congregation may follow the recommendation of the nuncio, choose another candidate on the terna, or ask that another terna be prepared.

Stage 4: The Pope's Decision

At a private audience with the Pope, usually on a Saturday, the Prefect of the Congregation for Bishops presents the recommendations of the Congregation to the Holy Father. A few days later, the Pope informs the Congregation of his decision. The Congregation then notifies the nuncio, who in turn contacts the candidate and asks if he will accept. If the answer is "yes," the Vatican is notified and a date is set for the announcement. It often takes six to eight months from the time a diocese becomes vacant until a new bishop is appointed, sometimes longer.