Diocesan Review Board Update, Names and Background

Before his installation this past April as the sixth Bishop of Memphis, Bishop David P. Talley stated he was “horrified and scandalized” by reports of the sexual misconduct of minors by clergy.

Bishop Talley made a commitment to the people across the Diocese of Memphis to do everything in his power to safeguard children and youth, to help those who were victims of misconduct and to be transparent, bringing to light any wrong doings of the past so healing can take place.

Similar to what he had done as the Bishop of Alexandria in Louisiana, Bishop Talley immediately asked the Memphis Diocesan Review Board to examine, prepare and disclose a list of clergy, credibly accused of sexual misconduct of minors. Also, to insure the most thorough process, the Bishop authorized the employment of a professional investigation company, Inquisitor, to assist the Review Board in investigating claims.

The Review Board has met numerous times since Bishop Talley’s installation to review any evidence in the Diocese of Memphis clergy personnel files that might indicate sexual abuse of a minor. In all, there have been three searches of the clergy personnel files with the most recent completed in December of 2019. In January of this year, Bishop Talley asked the investigators to examine all of the files again to make sure that nothing had been overlooked. The investigators have now recently completed looking at every clergy personnel file.

These thorough reviews have not only involved developing a list of clergy with claims in the Diocese of Memphis, it also involved compiling names of credibly accused clergy from other Dioceses or religious orders that may have at one time served our Diocese. The process required reviewing archives to determine whether there were any other allegations that could be discerned from historical documents.

Bishop Talley has emphasized how much he values the work of the Review Board and investigators, the seriousness with which they take all allegations and their dedication to ensuring the safety of children. He said, “the evil can only be purged through a vigilant process that is transparent to the public. The reviews must demonstrate the highest levels of honesty and scrutiny.”

The Review Board is a talented group of judges, former prosecutors, medical professionals and experts who are committed to thoroughly and impartially completing reviews with the assistance of investigators. The Board consists of nine voting members, including one priest and one deacon, and they function as an advisory body to Bishop Talley. Board members were selected because of their professional or work experience that enables them to provide insight and perspective.

The purpose of the Review Board is two-fold: First, to evaluate allegations of sexual misconduct by clerics involving minors and, secondly, to advise the Bishop as to appropriate steps and policies for the protection of children.

The following names and background are of the nine Review Board Members:

Memphis Diocesan Review Board Members

Patrick Lawler is a charter member of the Review Board since its inception in 2002 and has been the Chair of the Board for the past 15 years. He is the Chief Executive Officer of Youth Villages, one of the largest private providers of services to troubled children and their families in the country. Youth Villages provides services to more than 30,000 youth in 90 locations across 20 states with 3,000 employees. Patrick's career has been spent working with society's most vulnerable children. He began as a counselor at Tall Trees Guidance School when he was 18 years old and then worked at the Juvenile Court of Memphis and Shelby County for five years before becoming CEO of Youth Villages. Patrick has a bachelor's degree in Criminal Justice (1977) and a master's in Counseling (1981) from the University of Memphis. He enjoys swimming, reading, biking and spending time with his wife, Ellen, daughter, son and grandsons.
